Legacies of British Slave-ownership

A one-day workshop at Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum

Saturday 4th September 2010

This workshop examines the dispersal of compensation money paid to slave-owners following the abolition of slavery in 1833 and explores the ways in which the money was used by beneficiaries in Scotland as it shaped economic, social, cultural and political life over the next fifty years.

Speakers include:

Catherine Hall, Keith McClelland and Nick Draper (UCL)
on the legacies of Scottish slave-ownership

Eric Graham (University of Edinburgh)
on Scots and slave-ownership before 1834

Stephen Mullen (University of Glasgow)
on the Glasgow West India Association

Iain Whyte (University of Edinburgh)
on the Afro-Caribbean presence in 19th century Scotland (invited, to be confirmed)
